Dedication

This 110th edition of the Hollins University Spinster is dedicated to the 2008 Spinster staff. With no returning staff members, the new Spinster staff set to work finishing a feebly attempted book for a year that most of the staff had not even been at Hollins for. We'd also like to dedicate this yearbook to everyone else who contributed long hours in finishing something that should have been completed last June.

We would also like to send out a special thanks to Lisa O'Quinn, '07, Megan Hennessey, '07, Sonny Hutson, '07, Jenni Austin, '08, Casey Bridgers, '08, Amanda Miller, '08, and Angie Tabor, '08, for contributing photos from a number of events.

Also, we want to thank Kimberley Lockett for stepping in and helping finalize copy and layout for the Sports section. A special thanks also goes to Patty O'Toole for the constant support she has shown.

The biggest thanks of all goes out to Terry Cleveland, our Jostens representative, who has put in more time than anyone else to give Hollins a decent yearbook for 2007. Your hard work certainly has not gone by unnoticed by us. We love and appreciate you, Terry!

Student Life

Krispy Kreme and wacky clothing are some of the main components to kicking off Tinker Day. After all, how can anyone climb a mountain without a sugar rush and purple tights?

Tinker Day

Its 3 am; a rush of pots and pans are heard throughout the hall of your dorm; a handful of upperclassmen are screaming and yelling and banging on your door. You may grumble and roll back over in your bed, but by 6 the church bells ring and the girls rush through your halls again, chanting those wonderful words, "Its Tinker Day"!

Time for donuts and tutus as you gear up your funky wardrobe for the big day. Everyone assembles on front quad to hear the President speak. Shouts and cheers ring out as the spirit flag is waved and the hike up Tinker Mountain begins! Filled with laughs and fun, skits and songs, and food and friends, the Hollins tradition lives richly among students.

Kathryne Carter '07 and a friend look tired but quirky as the early morning gathering for Tinker Day takes place.

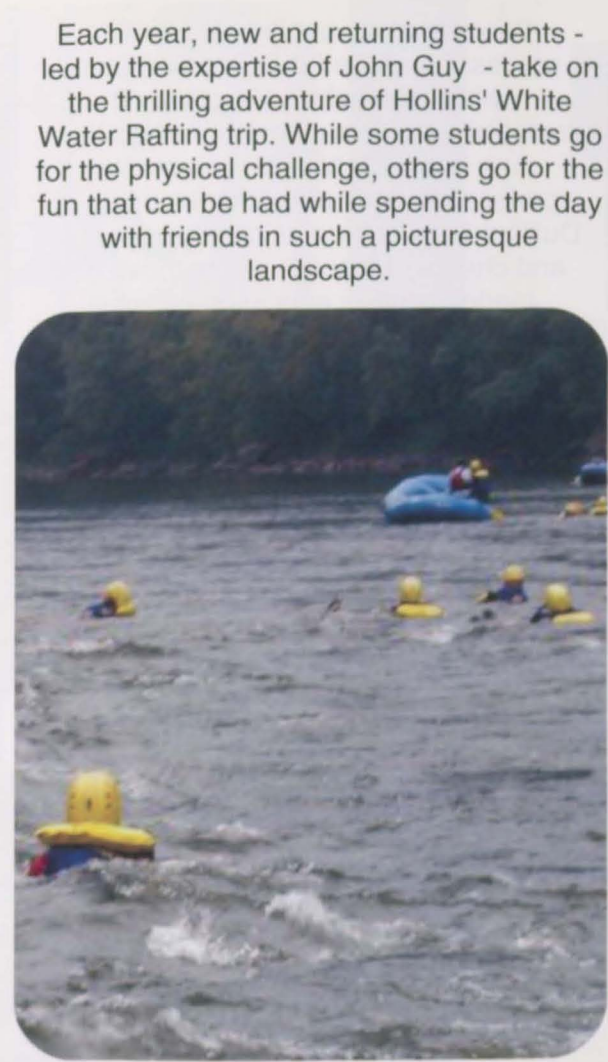

Each year, students huddle up for photo ops as they arrive on top of the mountain.

White-water Rafting

Freshmen orientation can be a little stressful. You have the first days of college, unpacking your room, a million sessions to attend about campus rules and safety, tons of paperwork, and to top it off, you wish your parents would just leave already!

To give everyone a little time to unwind and have a great opportunity for students to get to know some of their other classmates, Hollins provides one heck of an ice breaker trip - White Water Rafting! What better way to get to know some new people than by grabbing onto someone else's life vest as your group yells and tumbles over a rock in the rapids. Shall we say, good times?!

Each year, new and returning students - led by the expertise of John Guy - take on the thrilling adventure of Hollins' White Water Rafting trip. While some students go for the physical challenge, others go for the fun that can be had while spending the day with friends in such a picturesque landscape.

Left: A group of brave Hollins students use their strength - and trusty oars - to battle the raging river water.

Founders Day begins with seniors processing to the Founders Cemetery, where speeches of honor and remembrance are given. Following their trek down the hillside, seniors join professors, staff, and other students in DuPont Chapel for music, guest speakers and cheers of thanks - all for those who made a Hollins education possible.

Founders Day

With a day like Founders Day, what else can be had but smiles and cheers? Hollins long-standing tradition of this annual event is a means to honor and celebrate the lives of the men and women, so long ago, who made our single-sex education a reality. Without their fearless fortitude, who knows where decades of women would be today. That's why we continue to raise our hats - to perserverance, dedication and passion - and continue , as eventual graduates of Hollins, to carry these founding values with us throughout every step of our lives.

Seniors sing and cheer during their yearly visit to the Founders Cemetery.

Groups of seniors line the walkway from Main to DuPont Chapel for the start of Founders Day.

First Step

As a culmination of years spent working tirelessly toward the future, seniors regard the tradition of First Step as a time-honored and well-deserved celebration toward their last days at Hollins.

Upon the close of President Gray's speech during Opening Convocation, seniors lead the march onto front quad where the class president gives a speech and hand-painted bottles of champagne are readied for popping.

As corks hit the ground, students find themselves sopping but happy. Memories and tears soon follow, and anxieties are drowned in smiles - all coming together in the form of one daring senior class, prepared to conquer the year ahead.

Singing, laughing, and a touch of bubbly are some of the many highlights experienced during Opening Convocation, when seniors take their "first steps" into the final year.

Seniors line up on Front Quad to pop champagne and celebrate the tradition of First Step.

Sarah O'Brien giggles as she is drenched in champagne spray.

Donned in the finest commencement robes money can buy, seniors take their final walk across front quad during commencement. Some laugh and some cry, but it's all who breath a sigh of relief as they're handed the bachelor's degrees they've worked so hard to achieve.

Graduation Day

In the flash of an eye, it's all over. Graduation Day arrives on the Hollins campus and some are left to ask - what now?

What's certain at that moment, however, is the unity that binds each senior class and the realization that it was well worth the ride. On this day, seniors share memories, hug one another, rejoice with family, and hold tightly to the one item that symbolizes the culmination of every effort thus far...their college degree. Walk proudly into the future, seniors - you've earned the right!

Senior Carolyn Word can't seem to contain her excitement on graduation day.

Graduates who wear the blue Batten Leadership sash are noted for their continued leadership abilities.

Cotillion

One of two annual formal events at Hollins, Cotillion happens in the spring of each year and is hosted by the Hollins Activity Board. On this night, students get dressed up, grab a date or group of close friends, and prepare to rock out.

Cotillion is always about good friends, good food, and lots of laughs.

Students dance to the "Electric Slide".

A group of friends gather before Cotillion to kick off the night.

Drama, comedy and thrills abound in the Hollins theatrical rendition of Into the Woods. Seen here, students - in various roles - bring together excerpts from select children's stories to form one magical production.

Into the Woods

Played out as a collection of classic fairytales, Into the Woods cast members at the Hollins Theatre delight audiences with performances ranging from Cinderella's glass-slipped plight to Little Red Riding Hood's wolfe-as-granny incident.

Cast members assemble on stage for the finale, elaborately costumed and full of enchanting song.

Battle of the Bins

Each year, the Hollins community comes together on the front walkway of the Visual Arts Center to take part in an environmentally-centered event - Battle of the Bins - which is intended to raise awareness on the importance of recycling and bring the campus together for a day of fun.

Below: Erin Adams '08 designs her bin with the SCAVAS logo - a computer protection group she created.

Angie Smith '07 paints this bin to reflect her thoughts on a global cause.

May Fest

This year's Mayfest featured headliners Carbon Leaf and Farm Vegas - both of which hail from neighboring Richmond, VA. Students rocked out to each band's eclectic sound and enjoyed the grass-roots atmosphere that the night brought to life.

HORIZON QUEENS

By Angie Tabor ('08)

What a year, what a year! The 2006-2007 school year was an exciting one. Andi Miller from RMWC came to campus to interview Horizon students for a documentary in progress about women returning to school. Many Horizon students were wrapped up in their own side projects such as student films, student teaching, newspaper reporting, musical recitals, volunteering, and job training. This year we pulled together and managed to make the most of our busy schedules. And being the true royals that we are we managed to find time for fun. The Horizon lounge at Eastnor proved to be a sanctuary where Horizonites could bond in laughter and support. We had pasta lunches, salad bars, and tons of social time which we all enjoyed. In May many of Horizon students had a blast at HDP and Cotillion. We also all shared some laughs at the potluck dinner on the Eastnor patio. Whatever Horizon Queens do they always make sure fun their main priority.

We are all so proud of you!

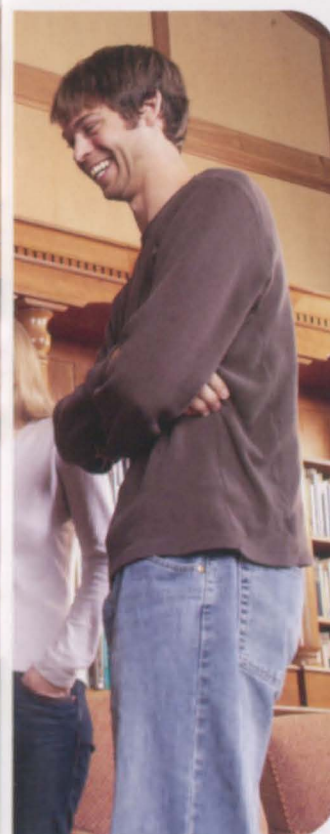

As part of the art department's final senior exhibition - ranging from painting to photography - professors Jan Knipe and Bob Sulkin host a celebratory pre-show gathering to honor the students' hard work.

Bill White, Professor of Art, peruses some of the work on display by the spring 2007 visiting artist, Mike Ananian.

Knowledge is the key to a happy life

Professor and student interaction is one of the hallmarks of a Hollins education. Whether stopping to chat on the way to class or attending a lecture given by a favorite faculty member, opportunities to connect with one another don't stop beyond classroom walls. Faculty on this campus are always interested and eager to engage with students and share their breadth of knowledge in a variety of forms.

To familiarize himself with the art department and student body in general, artist-in-residence, Mike Ananian, hosted a mid-year soiree in which several of his prominent paintings were displayed.

Kristin Bringewatt '08 leans closer to get a better look at the detail work involved in one of Mike Ananian's newest paintings.

Mary Petit '07 and Hollins staff member Vince Rewekant converse during the senior exhibition in the Visual Arts Center gallery.

Using their heads

The soccer team keep their minds on the goal

Kicking off the season early, the soccer team starts practice weeks before the start of school. Drawing in one of the biggest crowds, soccer stimulated spirit.

Captains Mandy Dziewulski, Kasey Garito and Sarah Venell kept the team pumped and positive through wins and losses, keeping the team focused. "Our focus would be for us to score," said Dziewulski. "All in all we [the captains] just didn't get down and didn't let the other girls get down on them selves."

The team greatly improved this season. Perhaps it was the combination of Coach Jone's second year coaching Hollins Soccer, the new players, the overall increase in dedication and commitment, or a combination of all of the above, but the team proved progress.

"As a team, we worked together to reach our goals for this season, and next year we look forward to reaching those goals again, and setting higher ones," said Morgan Hosea, freshman.

The team fell short of qualifying for tournaments this year, however, they did accomplish one more specific goal, and that was winning against a certain rival. "Hollins soccer had its best year yet. The team dynamic flowed, we all grew, had more fun than ever, and were very successful. It was really a great experience. Beating Randolph-Macon Women's was amazing," said Lia Kelinsky, sophomore.

Dziewulski, senior, received the Sportswoman of the Year award at the annual sports Banquet and acknowledged her team members, Hollins, and her coach.

"Coach Jones is one of the best things to happen to Hollins soccer, and athletics in a really long time," said Dziewulski; then added, "I love the Hollins soccer girls!"

After trying the laces on their cleats and yelling the "HU-Wah" cheer, led by Garito, these ladies played the field-like a Hollins girl can.

Saddle up

Hollins riders take the reins

The riding team had a successful year this year filled with honorable mention and traveling. The team won regionals over the intercollegiate levels other 11 colleges, attending Zone finals. One student, Kate Furches, 10, went to Nationals in Springfield, MA as an individual qualifier and tied for the Cacchione Cup High Point Rider.

The riding center took horses to the Springfield, MA event supplying horses and representing Hollins with excellence at the show. The barn manager, Elise Roschen, won the Prestigious Sportsmanship Award, along with Nancy Peterson, winning the Lifetime Achievement Award.

Prince William sports the Intermediate Regional Champion ribbon alongside his rider, Aly Sanderford. Hollins Placed third overall at this show. As a senior Sanderford had a lot of experience representing Hollins at horse shows. "Riding at Hollins was a terrific experience," said Sanderford. "I am very grateful of my time as a Hollins rider."

Between drills, running, and scrimmages, these girls put effort into practices. A lot of offense versus defense was intergraded into practice time, being an important factor in game-play.

Stick it to 'em

The Lacrosse team sticks together in competition

This year the lacrosse team went into season completely fresh and ready to start anew. The team welcomed a new coach this year, Liz Steinmetz, not only as their new coach for the year but their first full time coach in athletics. Though still learning the game, the team pulled together and gave it their best.

The team may not have been able to pull off an undefeated season, but through all the hardships and every game, the team grew closer through experience. Facing other hardships, such as losing six players mid season, the team really learned how honorable it is to support a team, even when they're not winning. Growing inside and out as team players and true Hollins players, these girls knew that it's all really about the fun of the game.

The team worked just as hard in practice as in games. It was important to show the same amount of intensity in preparation for competition.

The tennis team shows love for the game

In the fall season the team dominated in two of the three tournaments. Starting out the season, the Virginia Women's College Tennis Championship took place. Hollins domineered the competition to the point that by the end of the day they found themselves playing against their own teammates to decide placement. The next tournament was the Intercollegiate Tennis Association Regional, and shortly after Fall Festival, a tournament which took place at home, challenging against fellow ODAC members Roanoke College, Bridgewater College, and Emory and Henry College. Welcoming five first-years to the team, fall season gave them a glimpse of game play, knowing standards are set high for spring.

"Fall season is a great transition into spring season, because all the team building done in the fall really pays off when the spring matches come," said Tiffany Robinette, freshman. "As a freshman, being on the tennis team gave me a really great way to become a part of the Hollins community."

In their regular season, the team played

13 teams, 10 of those part of the Old Dominion Athletic Conference. For the team, most weekends consisted of tournament play.

In the spring season, Hollins had more opportunity to cheer on the team; eight of the games were played at home. Captains Candice Dalton, senior, and Barret Jones, senior, and Coach Leslie Bernard helped lead the team through another prevailing season, finishing up 9-4, 7-3 ODAC. But the season was not over then. In the Old Dominion Athletic Conference Women's Tennis Championship, Hollins went 2-1. Hollins tennis was given third place. Individual places were also given. The 2007 All-ODAC second teams were announced and Hollins received two placements: Maggie Bai, sophomore, for number two singles and Jones for number one singles. Jones also won the Sportswoman of the year award, given at the annual banquet.

"The past four years have been all about the team, and I could not have done it without coach" said Jones.

Taking time to practice before a tournament, Candace Dalton, senior, works on perfecting her strokes. Before each tournament, the team practices with each other before match-play.
